"While many thousands of medieval badges have been discovered in river banks and harbours since the nineteenth century, they resist accessibility, even to determined scholars: being small and now heavily tarnished, they are easily outshone or overlooked in the gallery space, they are fragile and their low-relief imagery and inscriptions can be difficult to read." — Digital Pilgrim Project (https://www.hoart.cam.ac.uk/research/the-digital-pilgrim-project)